CAO BANG - BAE CAN

① Thinks that cadres should know (I)

There are two kinds of cadres: (1) specialized cadres, (2) local cadres

1. Specialized cadres are the cadres who are dispatched by the organization to a locality to help and train local cadres. So the specialized cadres should not cover all the work, which should be done by the local cadres only. The specialized cadres should only help to make a plan, to give additional ideas, to correct the mistakes and guide the local cadres to work. The specialized cadres should be skilful, witty, patient. They should not be conceited, too fond of yourselves and irritated. They should show the local cadres the things that the latter do not know, to make them to understand and try to follow with ardour, to criticize them when they make mistakes. But criticism should be made in the reasonable way that it is accepted with gladness, and then mistakes are corrected.

2. The local cadres should try their best to study and improve yourselves to become fully-qualified for the job. They should try to accomplish everything by themselves. Their questions are necessary if they do not know anything about the matter. If they make mistakes, they should ask the specialized cadres to help them correct. If they try to study the new things and correct the mistakes, they will manage to work alone. Therefore they should not rely on the specialized cadres, should not compare with one another.

Both the specialized cadres and the local cadres work for the organization. The local cadres are well-informed of the local situation, but still lack experience. So they need assistance from the specialized cadres. The two kinds of cadres must assist each other; the specialized cadres must try their best to ~~show~~ ^{teach} and instruct as much as possible, the local cadres must spare no effort to study as possibly as they can. Then the work will improve quickly, the organization will develop and the revolution will succeed in a shorter time!
